

see English version below

X-Tutorial

Site-specific post-colonial practice

Projektleiterinnen oder -leiter

Marina Resende Santos, Jakob Wirth

Betreuerin oder Betreuer

Prof. Dr. Talja Blockland, Prof. Dr. Jörg Stöllmann

Institutionelle Anbindung

Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin, SozialwissenschaftenStadt- und Regionalplanung

Inhalte

In this theory/praxis seminar we will learn to apply postcolonial perspectives on real sites to develop a sensitive artistic practice. We will research and visit sites in Berlin and perform practical exercises as a seismograph of colonial structures. The opening session will be on 16/11 and the block at the end of the semester. How do we encounter colonialism in the public space? What function does it perform in our routines and perceptions of things and spaces? We will look at sites with historical ties to colonialism, as well as sites where new modes of imperialism and orientalism appear in trade, ecologies, design, and labor in the city. We will attend to the agency of spaces, infrastructures, and non-human beings as carriers of both colonization and emancipation. During the semester, we will provide theory inputs and meet and look at relevant contemporary practices, with input from the artists. In the workshop, students will develop and perform interventions for chosen sites.

Kursprache: Englisch

Wochentag und Uhrzeit: Samstag, Auftakt am 16.11., 15-18 Uhr, plus Blockveranstaltung am Ende des Semesters, im Block

Ort:

Kontakt

resendesantosmarina@gmail.com
post@jakobwirth.net

see English version now

X-Tutorial

Site-specific post-colonial practice

Project Leader

Marina Resende Santos, Jakob Wirth

Supervisor

Prof. Dr. Talja Blockland, Prof. Dr. Jörg Stöllmann

Institutional Affiliation

Humboldt-Universität zu Berlin, SozialwissenschaftenStadt- und Regionalplanung

Content

In this theory/praxis seminar we will learn to apply postcolonial perspectives on real sites to develop a sensitive artistic practice. We will research and visit sites in Berlin and perform practical exercises as a seismograph of colonial structures. The opening session will be on 16/11 and the block at the end of the semester. How do we encounter colonialism in the public space? What function does it perform in our routines and perceptions of things and spaces? We will look at sites with historical ties to colonialism, as well as sites where new modes of imperialism and orientalism appear in trade, ecologies, design, and labor in the city. We will attend to the agency of spaces, infrastructures, and non-human beings as carriers of both colonization and emancipation. During the semester, we will provide theory inputs and meet and look at relevant contemporary practices, with input from the artists. In the workshop, students will develop and perform interventions for chosen sites.

Course Language: Englisch

Schedule: Samstag, Auftakt am 16.11., 15-18 Uhr, plus Blockveranstaltung am Ende des Semesters, im Block

Location:

Contact

resendesantosmarina@gmail.com
post@jakobwirth.net